ECONOMIC WOES | Tehran warns against Strait of Hormuz transit without permission as prices of daily staples soar

Iran rial hits record low as US readies sanctions

Tehran: Iran's currency hit a record low on Monday as Washington prepared to announce fresh sanctions aimed at increasing pressure on an economy already battered by previous sanctions and a US naval blockade.

The rial dropped to 2.02 million to the US dollar as currency markets opened. Iran's official Central Bank rate stood at around 1.5 million rial to the dollar, but most Iranians pay the market rate.

Daily staples are becoming increasingly unaffordable. Since the war began, rice prices have risen about 60% and beef prices more than 150%. The International Monetary Fund forecasts GDP will contract by more than 5%.

Iran and Oman, on opposite sides of the Strait of Hormuz, are reportedly in the final stages of agreeing on a plan for joint management of the waterway. Oman's Foreign Minister is set to visit Iran on Tuesday.

To break the impasse, the Trump administration promised stronger sanctions, including secondary sanctions on countries that continue to do business with Iran.

Ahead of the announcement, Trump posted on social media: "Iran is completely collapsing!"

"President Trump decimated Iran's economy to a point where the rial has never been weaker and inflation has rarely been higher," US Treasury Secretary Scott Bessent wrote on Sunday in an opinion piece in the Financial Times.

"The regime's final refuge now lies in the self-deception of fearful nations that still believe accommodating aggression can secure a durable peace."
